The Chinese flag

In China the flag is known as this 五星红旗 meaning the five starred red flag.

It was designed by Zeng Liansong and was adopted on September 27th 1949

The flag was up on a pole by the 1st of October 1949 by the PLA the People's Liberation Army the flag was overlooking the capital of China, Beijing

The original Flag was called The Flag Of Qing Dynasty this was a scalene triangle with a yellow background with a red ball in the corner with a cultural dragon in the centre

They've also had another flag before the one they have now this one was called The Flag Of The Republic Of China this flag is three quarters covered in blue and one quarter in red with a blue sun in the middle of the red corner

Chinese Foods

Sweet and sour Pork is one of the most traditional dish in China follow by a few which I will talk about now.

Kung pao chicken is also very well known in China, this is like a stir fry with vegetables, peanuts and lovely meat with a sauce.

In China it is considered rude to finish your plate your are supposed to leave a small bit so you can show the chef that they provided you with enough food. It is considered acceptable to slurp your noodles to show a sign of appreciation.

China eats lots on food which Europe would consider disgusting, they eat chicken feet, pigs ears, duck blood, intestines and a century egg. The century egg is preserved in a mixture of charcoal and quicklime for weeks and months this food is eaten as a delicacy in China

The Chinese New Year

The Chinese New Year animals, there is 12, in order, The rat, Ox, Tiger, rabbit, dragon, snake, horse, goat, monkey, rooster, dog, pig. I was born in 2007, the year of the Pig. There is a massive celebration for the New Years. Over 2017 million people attend the festivals each year. They hold up dragons on poles and celebrate what the new year would bring.
